Fazal's Story

I have a family; we were together but now I don't have any contact with them and I don't know where they are.
I liked life in Afghanistan. Everything was simple. The good thing was that we were together with our family and friends and the bad things was war between government and some other parties. I had to leave because my life was in danger. If I stayed in my country, I would be dead.

I miss my family and friends a lot. The journey was very long and terrible because every time we were trying to get to another country or cross the border, there was nothing to help us.

We have a team of social workers here and they help us with everything but I don't have any family members here. In my free time, I go swimming and to the gym. My hopes are to do a lot for myself and for people here, like I want to become an interpreter which can help people and it's my hope. My dream is to be with my family.

Everything is different from our country especially the freedom, religion, cultures: there is nothing hard for me in Scotland.
