Nanaobil's Story

A new chapter, same dreams

I'm from Darfur in Sudan.

My family is very important to me but it's hard to talk about what happened with my family. I love my family but we have a difficult history in Sudan. My country is not all bad: in Arabic we say it's like everything – not all bad or all good. Things in my country are both bad and good.

A long journey

I had a very long trip – when I was 17 I moved. My family helped me to come here so now I hope one day I can help my farily.

Life in Scotland

Scotland is nice. There are lovely people in Scotland, because they try to help you. They feel about what we feel. I like learning English, so I hope they like that I'm learning about their language, about everything Scottish.

The weather & my city

I think the weather is nice – sometimes it's cold – but actually we are from Africa so we love the heat, but it's nice sometimes.

I live in Aberdeen – this is my city now, so I love my city. I love people from Scotland and from everywhere.

Friends & English

I don't have Scottish friends yet but I have many friends from different countries. One day I will make friends with Scottish people, but now my English is too bad when I practise. I try, I'd like to, but I'm a bit scared. Sometimes my English is not too bad.

Small steps... big dreams!

My dream

My dream is to become a lawyer here. Let's go help the people who helped you to become successful here.
I promised myself. I'm working toward this now.

Different places, same hopes ♡
