Scottish Hockey is the national governing body for hockey in Scotland, supporting the sport from grassroots to elite performance.

The Scotland Development Programme (SDP) is a key stage in the national player pathway, bridging the gap between the National Aspiring and Senior programmes. It identifies and develops the next generation of international players by providing athletes under 23 with high-quality training, competitive opportunities, and a clear route towards senior international hockey.

This is an exciting opportunity to coach within the SDP Women's squad, working with talented athletes and an experienced support team. The programme culminates in the U21 EuroHockey Championships, where our aim is to be highly competitive in Europe's top division and will also act as a pilot for future SDP delivery. The role is central to strengthening player technical skills and preparing athletes for senior international hockey.

This is not a full-time role, and time commitments will vary.

The schedule includes single day training sessions and multiday camps. The squad will consist of players up to approximately 23 years old, from which the U21 team will be selected. This is an exciting opportunity to work alongside the SDP Lead Coach, Junior and Senior National coaches and a talented support team, helping develop Scotland's next generation of international hockey players.

Key Responsibilities

- Support the technical and tactical delivery of the SDP, ensuring a high-performance coaching environment.
- Assist in coaching sessions, match preparation, and player development in alignment with Scottish Hockey's talent framework.
- Work closely with the Lead Coach and multidisciplinary team, fostering a professional and supportive environment.
- Help identify and monitor high-potential players through observation days and competitions.
- Contribute to a culture of excellence by mentoring players, setting high standards, and encouraging continuous development.
- Support the integration of the SDP with the pathway, senior squads and competitive international opportunities.
- Ensure compliance with Scottish Hockey's policies, including safeguarding, code of conduct, and athlete welfare.

Who Are We Looking For?
